The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The limitation "the third" lacks proper antecedent basis.

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 2, 4, 7 and 12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Brazas Jr et al (5696749).

The reference shows an optical disk reading device comprising: a first light beam component disposed on a substrate producing a first light beam fig 4 element 40a, a second light beam disposed on a second substrate separated from the first substrate producing a second light beam 40, a first light receiving element and a second light receiving element disposed on the second substrate for receiving the first and second light beams reflected from the disk fig 5, a beam splitter 114 and objective lens 52.

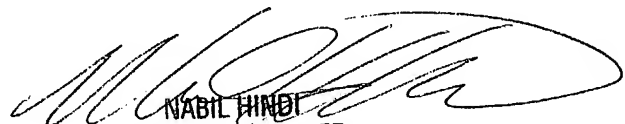

With respect to the limitations of claim 2 and 4. The reference discloses the use of a first and second light beams having different wavelengths to read different disk types column 2 lines 9-15. The use of 730nm, 640nm, 430nm is merely a standard in the optical disk reading apparatus utilizing different disk types.

Art Unit: 2655

Claims 5, 6 and 8-11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

None of the cited prior art shows or teaches a single first or second emitting module is configured to emit a third light beam having different wavelength from the first and second light beams and the use of a third photo detection means for receiving the third light beam reflected from the disk.
